Nonexempt employees are covered by FLSA rules and regulations, and exempt employees are not. Exempt positions are excluded from minimum wage, overtime regulations, and other rights and protections afforded nonexempt workers. Employers must pay a salary rather than an hourly wage for a position for it to be exempt.